Leading Sustainable Solutions from Self to Society

CONCEPT NOTE

We're now past the halfway mark to the 2030 deadline for achieving the United Nations Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs)—and the global reality is sobering. Despite ambitious targets and growing awareness, progress has been slow and uneven. Incremental change won't get us there. Bold, locally grounded solutions are more critical than ever. For Africa, this urgency hits differently.

The pandemic disrupted lives and economies. Conflict, climate change, and shifting donor priorities have added more strain. Yet amid these challenges, the continent continues to shine with its most powerful asset: its people. Innovators, social entrepreneurs, NGOs, and grassroots movements across Africa are rising to meet these challenges with tenacity and vision. But a key obstacle remains—accessing and effectively using the resources they already have. This is where the power of resourcefulness comes in.

At last year's summit, one message echoed across all conversations: Africa doesn't lack ideas—it needs better ways to mobilize and maximize what's already within reach. From informal networks to underutilized infrastructure, from youth talent to community wisdom—resourcefulness is not just a mindset; it's a movement.

This year, we go deeper.

Leading Sustainable Solutions from Self to Society

CONCEPT NOTE

The 7th Sustaining Impact Summit will explore the theme:

“African Resourcefulness: Leading Sustainable Solutions from Self to Society.”

We'll bring together impact-oriented organizations from across the continent—social enterprises, NGOs, cooperatives, and grassroots organizations— and support institutions to explore how resourcefulness can help us overcome constraints, unlock new possibilities, and drive meaningful progress on the SDGs from the ground up. Over two dynamic days, we will ask:

How can African actors creatively and collaboratively leverage local assets to build solutions that are sustainable, scalable, and deeply rooted in context?

We'll share stories, tools, and strategies that show what's working, what's possible, and how resourcefulness can shift systems—not just projects. This is more than a summit. It's a call to action for all of us working at the intersection of impact and innovation in Africa.

Join us and let's lead the way—from self to society.
